Khonglah; Prof. S.R. Syngkon (teaching faculty representative); and two student representatives from the department

Meraki serves as a creative outlet for both students and teachers and has been in circulation for quite some time over the past few years. The purpose of the magazine is to provide a platform for a diverse range of content that is both educational and entertaining.

The fourth edition of Meraki is visually stunning; its cover design is inspired by a student contributor's photography. Everyone who contributed in writing, photography, and artwork was able to communicate their respective messages and skills effectively. The recent release of Meraki highlights the department's and its Literary Society's commitment to providing relevant and valuable content to its readers.
